

Share an example of a case study in a UX design portfolio

As you continue to develop your design skill set, you should pay attention to designers you admire, and identify the methods they use to document their work. If there are no designers that come to mind, check out the creatives on Dribbble or Behance and identify a few that stand out to you. Then, consider the questions below:

What is one thing you noticed about how they document their work?

What is something you would like to imitate in your portfolio?