

≡ Item Navigation

Examples of great public speakers

As you prepare for your own presentation, whether it's about research insights or design ideas, it can be helpful to check out strong public speakers for inspiration. Here are three great public speakers to inspire you!

Molly Burke

Molly Burke, a beauty YouTuber and advocate for disability awareness, is known for her compelling videos and presentation style. She displays confident body language and speaks clearly at a steady pace. Her speech is concise and direct, which helps keep her audience interested. Check out a great example of Molly Burke's public speaking style in this video: Every Way Being Blind Makes My Life Different

Jill Bolte Taylor

Jill Bolte Taylor is an American neuroanatomist who suffered a life-changing stroke. She delivered an incredibly compelling TED Talk about how she studied her stroke as it was happening . She uses stories in her presentation to keep the audience interested from the beginning until the end.

Sir Ken Robinson

Sir Ken Robinson was a British author and international adviser on education in the arts. He gave a TED Talk about the lack of creativity in schools , which became the most popular TED talk of all time. In the video, he uses anecdotes to keep his audience engaged and entertained. He also emphasizes his words by adding pauses. These pauses give listeners time to process the information and make personal connections to their own experiences and understanding.

Mark as completed

Like

Dislike

Report an issue

