Learn more about portfolio case studies

In UX design, a case study is a summarized presentation of a design project that typically includes the project goal and objectives, each team member's role, the process the team followed, and the outcome of the project. Effective case studies demonstrate the planning, strategy, and creativity you put into each project. You'll create case studies for your portfolio website to showcase each of the design projects you complete as part of this certificate program and in your future UX design jobs.

If you've been taking the courses of this certificate program in order, you've already created a case study in your portfolio to showcase your mobile app designs. Now, it's time to create a case study for the responsive website you designed in this course. If you need a refresher, you can revisit this video on creating a case study for your portfolio project ↗ and this reading with a case study checklist ↗ from the previous course of the program.
