

Optional - Share learnings from your usability study about a lo-fi prototype

You've covered a lot of ground so far, from designing your own low-fidelity website prototype to evaluating your designs in a usability study. Now, let's pause and reflect on the work you've done. Consider your experience with the usability study and what you learned about your prototype. To get your ideas flowing, answer the following questions:

Was there anything that surprised you in the usability study?

Was there anything that you found particularly useful?
