

Share examples of designing for different use cases

So far, we considered the difference between an application and a website, and how the use case may vary by platform. Now, think about the various products and services you use in the real world. Identify an example of a dedicated mobile app with a corresponding website. Then, answer the following questions in the discussion forum:

What is the purpose of the dedicated mobile app?

What is the purpose of the corresponding website?

How do they relate?

How are they different?
