1.
There will be numerous occasions in your professional career where you will need to request feedback. It can be intimidating, but with practice you'll become more accustomed to the process. Considering your own experiences of asking for feedback, reflect on the following questions:
How was your experience asking for feedback similar to a design critique?
How was it different?