Share insights from your usability study

Now that you're familiar with how to build and test a prototype, let's consider what you learned about your own low-fidelity prototype during the usability study. Here are a couple questions to help you generate ideas for this discussion:
Was there anything that surprised you?

Did you find anything particularly useful? Why or why not?